Drawings

The drawings are objected to under 37 CFR 1.83(b) because they are incomplete. 37 CFR 1.83(b) reads as follows:

When the invention consists of an improvement on an old machine the drawing must when possible exhibit, in one or more views, the improved portion itself, disconnected from the old structure, and also in another view, so much only of the old structure as will suffice to show the connection of the invention therewith.

Corrected drawing sheets are required in reply to the Office action to avoid abandonment of the application. Any amended replacement drawing sheet should include all of the figures appearing on the immediate prior version of the sheet, even if only one figure is being amended. The figure or figure number of an amended drawing should not be labeled as "amended." If a drawing figure is to be canceled, the appropriate figure must be removed from the replacement sheet, and where necessary, the remaining figures must be renumbered and appropriate changes made to the brief description of the several views of the drawings for consistency. Additional replacement sheets may be necessary to show the renumbering of the remaining figures. The replacement sheet(s) should be labeled "Replacement Sheet" in the page header (as per 37 CFR 1.84(c)) so as not to obstruct any portion of the drawing figures. If the changes are not accepted by the examiner, the applicant will be notified and informed of any required corrective action in the next Office action. The objection to the drawings will not be held in abeyance.

Page 5 of the specification describes the features illustrated in figure 1 of the drawings. While the drawing appears to show angle delta, it is not clear which reference lines subtends this angle. It is not clear what axis defines the "momentary axis of rotation P". P1 and P2 are not properly illustrated. Likewise, C1 and C2 are not properly illustrated. There is no illustration of the joint force F in the position P2 which shows the counteractions of the rotation at angle delta. Page 4, it is not clear which reference lines, ie normal to the contact surfaces, defines the maximum angle of 40 degrees.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Kubein-Meesentburg et al (6235060) or Pappas (5871539).

Kubein-Meesentburg et al and Pappas disclose an artificial joint for use as an endoprosthesis for a human knee joint, the artificial joint comprising a first joint compartment formed by a first condyle and a first socket and a second joint compartment formed by a second condyle and a second socket. While neither Kubein-Meesentburg et al or Pappas specifically discloses the operating function between the first and second joint, it appears from the drawings that the two contact surfaces of the respective joint compartments are offset in a main functional plane, and wherein the contact surfaces of the two joint compartments are sloped as a function of the knee joint flexion angle such that surface normals of the contact surfaces have a common point of intersection at the flexion angle illustrated in the figures.

Claim 2, the contact surfaces of Kubein-Meesentburg et al and Pappas have a slope that ascends to a center of the joint.

Claim 3, the contact surfaces, of Kubein-Meesentburg et al and Pappas, on both sides of the convex curvature are arranged at the junction to a concave shape.

Claim 4, the surface normals of the contact surfaces of Kubein-Meesentburg et al and Pappas appears to form an angle of at most 40 degrees relative to the effective direction of a resultant joint force loading the implant.

Claim 5, the contact surfaces each have a different slope angle.
